

Dealing With Weekends

The eighth graders are very imaginative when it comes to conquering a boring weekend. Riding motorcycles or four wheelers might pass the afternoon by. If you are grounded, sneak out to pass the night away. Some of the guys like to hunt, skateboard, or play football. Some of the girls like to listen to the radio, talk on the phone, or go to a friend's house. Watching a movie, playing the Nintendo, or reading the paper could pass away a boring, rainy day. But the main thing that the eighth graders would do to conquer a boring weekend would be to sleep all weekend long.

Gazing into outer space, Jeremy, Neil, and Shaun try to determine what it is that they are looking at.

Studying while walking? Denny crams the last little bit in.
