Things have changed extremely since last year for this group of youngsters. This year the class has doubled in size and all of them seem to have adjusted well. Maria Duncan says that she likes the change. Now she has another girl in her class and this means she will not be the only May Day attendant.

The new students all agree AJA is definitely different and more strict than their old schools. Everyone, especially Mrs. Horton, has made them feel like they've been here forever!

Russ Kinard can't seem to understand why he was awakened just to take a picture, but he smiles brightly anyway.

Joshua Overlock can't wait to get tall enough to reach the water fountain without standing on the milk crate.

"What do I look like, a door stop?" says Sally Malphrus as she smiles for the camera.
