The Seventh Grade works so hard they hardly have time to smile for the photographer . . . especially in Mr. Fender's science class!

The Seventh Grade, which is made up of twelve students, was asked to answer this question, "What do you like about high school?" Ashley Nettles, Wesley Wade, and Norman Kinard like changing classes, while Jennifer Barr, Daniel Bessinger, and Kara Hiers like having a study hall.

The Class of '99 also enjoys being an important part of the JV sports program. Participating in extra-curricular activities helps you feel like a more important part of the AJA family.

Entering Seventh Grade is hard for some because you're too old to play children's games and yet too young to do many of the things some high school students do.

Homeroom teacher, Mrs. Evelyn Rentz, helps the students adjust to life on "the other end of the building!"
