

. . . The spiritual qualities must be strengthened to guide the thoughts of the acute mind and the steps of the strong body down the paths of manliness, unselfishness, duty, and service, to the great satisfaction of having not only made a living, but having lived successfully a life.

"The God who gave us life, gave us liberty at the same time."
—JEFFERSON.

. . . It is these spiritual characteristics, more than any other, by which the Great Commandant of the Universe adjudges each life a success or failure.
