

Yet nothing has really ended. A day has passed, yes . . . but there will be others, all different. What we have gained and given today is permanent; each experience has shaped us, however slightly. This has been a day of life, of growth of excitement—our day.