

FOREWORD

The year is drawing to a close, and man is a being who tends to look backward and reflect. In quiet moments, we can remember the good times, the hard times, the joy and sorrow of a year gone by.

Camden Military Academy was a vital part of our lives and as always in life, one gets back just what he puts in. By trying to do our best, giving a smile instead of a frown, saying a good word instead of a gripe and attempting to make things easier for everyone, we reach closer to what it truly means to be a man.

If in this year we have all learned something about how to give and take, how to face troubles squarely and without fear, then this has been a good year. Suddenly, the true purpose of the Academy is clear—to teach each of us—to be a better, more solid human being.

A yearbook is a collection of memories and the hope of the EXCALIBUR staff is that this annual will serve as a reminder of the events that took place in 1968-69 at Camden Military Academy. May they be good memories and may we have the understanding that in most ways, it was a good year. To those who do not graduate this year, good luck in the future. Remember us as we will remember you.
