

COL. JAMES T. DALLAS was born in Greensboro, North Carolina. He is the instructor of French I and French II. He received his A.B. Degree at the University of South Carolina and did graduate work at the University of d'Aix Marseilles, Aix-en-Provence, France.

Col. Dallas came to Camden Military Academy in 1958. He has been an instructor for eleven years and is now the commandant of cadets.

It has been the goal of Col. Dallas to make Camden Military Academy as fine a school as possible, and he has worked diligently to accomplish this ideal.

MAJOR WILLIAM P. BECKHAM has served Camden Military Academy for eleven years, first as a professor of military science. He is now the Academy's assistant Commandant, and has given untold hours of time and devotion to the school.

Major Beckham feels that everyone should have a high school education, and should go to college if possible. It has always been his purpose to guide and assist the cadets at CMA so that they might get the full benefit of the Academy's training program.

Major Beckham is a dynamic man who isn't ashamed to say "I'm still learning—these cadets teach me something new every day."
