

HONOR COUNCIL

The Honor Council is the actual basis of all trust, pride, and honor at our academy. Cadets are sworn in before they come before the board. The honor council demands the truth in all testimony. It is the privilege of a cadet not to testify against himself. However, if a cadet chooses to give testimony that may tend to incriminate himself he must tell the truth and nothing but the whole truth. Since men testifying in an honor council must take an oath upon The Holy Bible, it is the opinion of the council that anyone who fails to tell the truth before the board does not qualify morally and will be dismissed from school.

Major Beckham is in charge of the honor council. He has been head of the honor council for twelve years. The honor council investigates only extremely serious infractions of the rules and regulations. The council mainly concerns itself with offences that tend toward matters that can be injurious to the welfare of the cadet corps in general or is morally deficient by the code of our cadet corps.

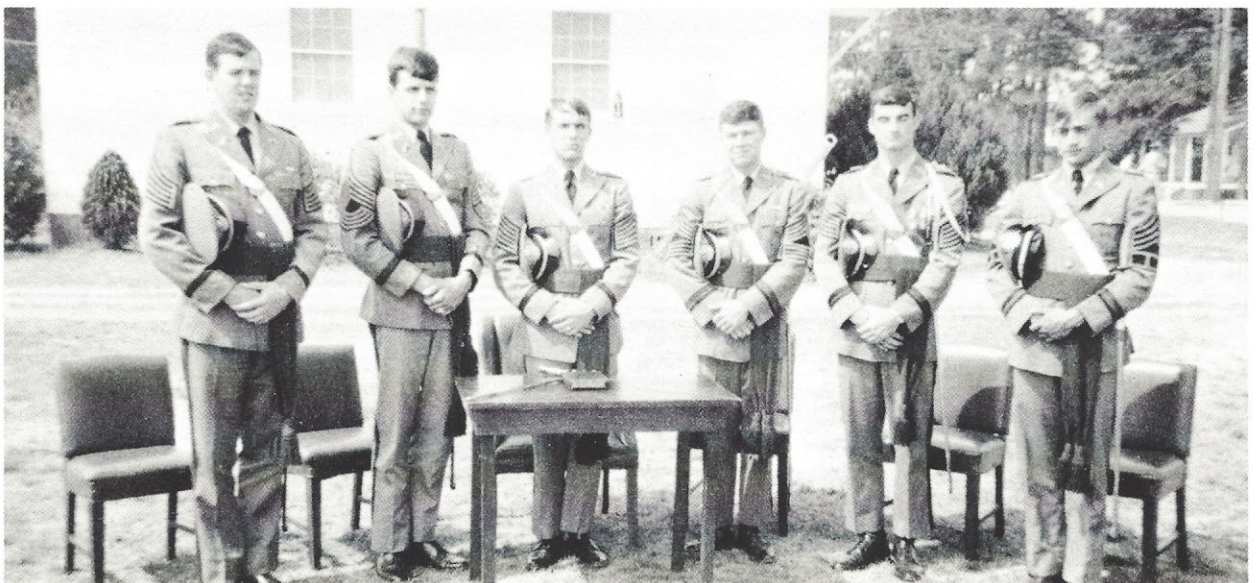

The honor council consists of Major Beckham, the battalion commander, the adjutant, and all four company commanders. The cadet officers that are on the board aid Major Beckham in investigating matters brought before the council.
