The 1979 Spartan baseball team will be a more rounded club than last year's PAC runner-up team. This year's club, composed of five returning lettermen and several new players, is expected to bring to Camden the conference championship which eluded us last year.

The club will be led by seniors Chad Watts, a thoroughbred on the mound; Emilio Gonzalez and Chuck Owens, two versatile players; and sophomores Lindy Runyan, a three-year letterman and potential college second baseman, and John Blevins, an all-around athlete. Problem areas, if any, will stem from lack of depth in pitching and inconsistency at the plate.

Coach Steven Tucker, in his first year of coaching the team, says his club will be ready to meet any challenge that arises along the road to victory. Good luck in the quest for the Palmetto Athletic Conference championship.
