

AFTERNOON ATHLETICS

An intramural sports program.

Intra-corps sports competition is serious business. Twice a week cadets turn out to compete against one another in volleyball, touch football, basketball, kickball, tennis, softball, track, and swimming. Horseback riding, at cadets' expense, is offered as a program adjunct. Faculty officers supervise play, coach, and even join the action.

Each six weeks cadets participate in a different sport, increasing physical conditioning and coordination, and letting individuals know not only their own limits but also in which activities they excel. A field day, the last Saturday of the school year, pits company teams against each other to determine the intramurals champion.

The games build a sense of good sportsmanship and a camaraderie which increases each young man's overall growth.

Clockwise right: McKagen spikes the ball as Craven "sees" there is no chance. Cadets enjoy a pyramidal challenge. Tension mounts as the play begins. Athletes warm up before a volleyball game. Opposite page, clockwise, top: Players eagerly await the free throw shot. Ferguson, Livesay, and Whitley in a dead heat dash. Players advance to opposite sides for the game to begin. Cadets take a break from PT action. Livesay saves the goal at soccer.

