

“... it was Greek to me.”

But not to fifteen cadets who've got it all together. They earn above average grades. They demonstrate leadership ability. Their attitudes are positive. They're members of the honor society, Delta Kappa Sigma, selected through faculty recommendation.

Major Robert Thorp leads the group which plays an active part in student life: operating ballgame concessions, collecting cans for recycling, demonstrating academic ability by earning 85 averages. Special activities within the society are not limited to eating out and going to the movies. They go to the marketplace to help better their knowledge of community and society.
