

Custodial engineering.

Swing that mop. Push that broom. Activity in the gymnasium ranges from basketball to dance, concerts to practice drill. Activity in the gymnasium is almost constant. Everyone benefits from a clean facility and Gym Staff keeps theirs that way. Bleachers appear and disappear; chairs are set up, knocked down, and stored; basketball backboards swing up and out of the way, then back — rapidly and efficiently. Shoot the hoop, anyone?

A well-groomed gym staff (right): (front) Albarracin, Taylor, Weible, (back) Adcock, Evans, Blackmon.

Take the plunge.

C'mon in, the water's fine. Swimming's great during those sultry days of late summer and again in springtime, but the pool provides more than just a place for aquatic fun. It's also a facility for water safety instruction. Captain James White and his crew devote lots of time and effort to instructing cadets and to maintaining the pool. Long after recreational swimmers have disappeared from poolside, lifesaving courses are still underway. Cadets who complete the training assure swimmers top safety and themselves a feeling of accomplishment, satisfaction from a greater capacity for humanitarian effort in their new capability for lifesaving.

Below, cooling out on the patio are pool staff and lifeguards: Hanna, Taylor, Albarracin, Hernandez, Hudson, Mocklow, SC Brown, Boulware, CD Reed, PG Bigness, Onley, Mahan, Captain White (advisor/instructor).

