

JROTC TRAINING

Providing an atmosphere for excellence.

An individual may enter a military establishment bewildered and lonely. Once he completes military training at CMA, he will have changed from a boy to a young man of maturity, with high moral standards and self-disciplined.

Camden Military Academy provides the opportunity for this change. The academy military structure is an infantry battalion commanded by a cadet lieutenant colonel and comprises four companies, all of which are headed by cadet captains. These leaders have the task of instructing cadets in military custom and courtesy. Annually, a representative of the Department of the Army evaluates command, honors, and military knowledge, when the corps proudly competes for designation as an Honor Unit with Distinction, as achieved in the many years preceding this one.

Battalion Staff. Front: Scott Raynal. First Row: Kevin Taylor, Latta Baucom, Ian Baucom. Second Row: Richie Boyd, Russell Allsbrook, Sam Tyson. Remaining cadets in rear, left to right: Robert Self, Cliff Carter, Joel Howard, Paul Craig.

Color guard: Gary Micko, Chip O'Dell, James Davis, Bill Jaeger, Stephen Tindall, Alec Geiger, in front of CMA's Dining Hall.