

During a break at the Christmas dance, Doug Mahan serves at the punch bowl while Eddie Coker helps himself to cake.

Esprit de corps exhibited by cadets at basketball games is clearly evident here.

A contingent of Camden Military Academy cadets marches in Camden's annual Christmas Parade. Kevin Taylor, Ian Baucom, and Richie Cannon are in step down Broad Street.

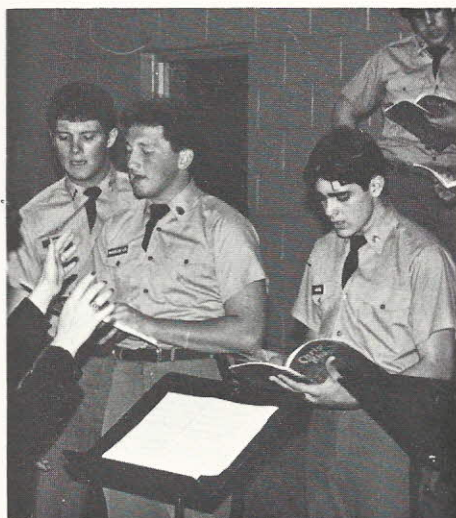

Scott Raynal, voted Best All Around by his senior peers, wonders what else could possibly be squeezed into his schedule.

A PLACE APART

The campus and beyond.

The daily schedule of the cadet is full enough, but many activities outside both the classroom and the campus combine to provide him a complete schedule. Community involvement builds the reputation of the academy and gives cadets a chance to meet the people of Camden. These views of the world of the CMA cadet are a small portion of the panorama of scenes that he may make, from attending a Saturday night basketball game to participating in an Air Force general's retirement ceremony to watching the running of the international Colonial Cup Steeplechase races.

Mrs. Jeanelle Williams, Jay Carter, Tony Mocklow, Ray Hudson, and Richard Alverio sing carols at the Carlisle House Christmas Program.

Ed Shuler drops by the barber shop to get a trim from school barber Jimmy Tyson.

Rich Pichette observes a Colonial Cup outrider while he takes a between-events break from posting race results.
