

(Left) Keith Crump, Michael Drew, Dan Guthrie, Dana Lunsford, and Tony Harper blow their horns during band class. Mike Burns and David White (below) experiment with the Apple IIC.

Mrs. Melinda Kane, Librarian, assists Robbie Vergnolle and Paul Tamburrino in a research project.

Jon Faulkner sets out eagerly for his next class.

Major Gale assures that even Steven Witter is on page during senior English class.

A FAIR CHANCE TO SUCCEED

Academic achievement is essential to developing the whole man. Primarily college preparatory for grades seven through twelve, CMA offers an excellent academic program, small classes, and fully competent faculty. Evening study halls promote good study habits and, for those who need it or request it, structured tutorial classes are part of the regular schedule each Tuesday and Thursday afternoon. Grade results are posted each two weeks and report cards reach home every six weeks.

These marking periods are important to every cadet for they directly affect privileges granted and loss of the same. An average of eighty-five per cent or above, with no grade less than seventy-five, signals inclusion on the Honors List with automatic library privileges, greater relaxation in rooms during study hall, etc. Failures require attendance at tutorials, multiple or repeated failures result in scheduling for special study halls on Friday and Sunday nights.

Individualized attention and reward for good performance pay off. Even the most average cadets soon believe they can do well and the self-discipline which develops from completing homework on a regular basis and at scheduled times has transfer to other non-academic tasks and responsibilities.

Every student deserves a fair chance to succeed in his studies, to prepare for college or for the marketplace. Camden Military Academy provides that opportunity.