

Leadership is what it's all about at Camden Military Academy. From battalion commander, through company staffs, down to the squad leader and the last man in line, chain of command and the control it affords make the battalion work. Staff organizations, including Color Guard and Cannon Detail, provide precision and a spit 'n polish quality which makes parades and ceremonies extra special. These individuals, working as teams, are among the sharpest cadets in the corps.
