

WE ARE THE PEOPLE

We are the school.

Academic buildings, barracks, parade grounds, sports facilities and much more comprise the campus of Camden Military Academy, but it is people that give it life and heart. Individuals of different backgrounds and from all over the United States and many foreign countries came together here to work, to play, and to make each academic year successful. Through everyday association and cooperation, students and faculty bond together to form one group personality, one which is highly complex. Each and every cadet, faculty and staff member contributes to it.

CMA people range from newboys, a mixed batch of often scared kids at the beginning of the year, to self-confident upperclassmen, secure in their place, with already formed friendships which will endure throughout their lives. In place at the start of each year are faculty and staff who provide a wealth of background and experience to stimulate intellectual and social growth. And just as there are always people behind the scenes, as in moviemaking—the ones who make the movie work—the same is true here. Dedicated service staffs maintain and repair things, prepare food, and keep the place running. It's all done together.

We are the people; we are the school.

Top: School nurse Captain Larry Edwards dresses Ian Eastman's hurt toe during infirmary sickcall.

Be there any doubt (right), Mrs. Bessie Davis, dietician, makes her point to KP Todd Ramella as Stephen Hayes looks on.

They serve it hot from the kitchen, three times a day, every day: Anita Bethea, Luther Thompson, Adell Williams, Catherine Hill, Charles Haynesworth, Crystal Barwick.

