At this all-male bastion, cadets enjoy universal membership in a society for appreciating feminine pulchritude. Each has a concept of his ultimate ultrafox and any cadet may submit a photograph of his "real world" female ideal for judging in CMA's Miss Excalibur contest.

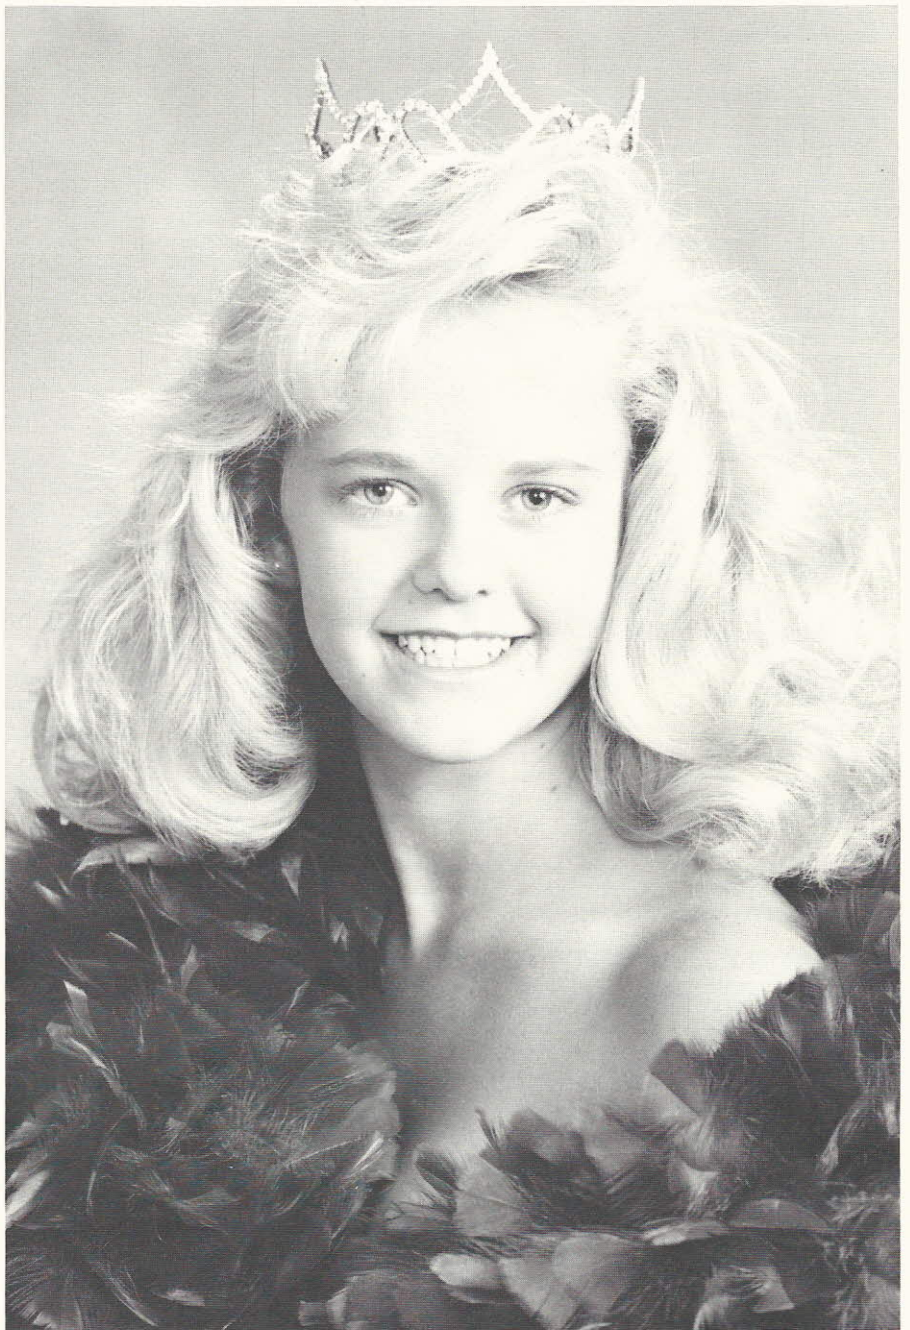

Sherry Thrift Bradshaw, Miss America 1987 First Runner-Up, selected the winner and the first and second runner-up. The judge advised, "I was very flattered by your request that I be the judge of your 'Miss Excalibur' contest. All of the girls were beautiful. I found it very difficult to pick a winner but as all judges must do, I made a decision! I based my selection on how photogenic the girl was, her expression, her eye contact, and her overall appearance. Please convey to all the contestants that beauty is definitely in the eye of the beholder and everyone sees differently. Thank you for allowing me the honor of selecting 'Miss Excalibur.' "

Miss Excalibur 1988 is Jennifer Culbertson of Columbia, South Carolina. Sponsored by Lamar Shaw, this blue-eyed blonde thirteen-year-old attends Lexington Middle School and holds the title of "Little Miss South Carolina 1988."

First runner-up, Caroline Mendenhall is a blue-eyed blonde from Charlotte, North Carolina, who models for Benetton. A tenth grader at Providence Day School, she was "Miss North Carolina Perfect Teen 1987." Stephen Hayes is her sponsor.

From Camden, blue-eyed, blonde-haired Crystal Cannon, sponsored by Carl Reinholtz, is second runner-up. A senior at Camden High, she is a flag girl for CHS's band.

They're beautiful, blue-eyed, and blonde.
