

Club experience is frequent and satisfying

something for almost everyone.

An important adjunct to classroom learning is the experience which clubs and organizations provide. Activity is frequent and satisfying.

Fine Arts Club membership is a ticket for cadets to attend cultural events on-campus and in the community beyond. Capt. Scott Sloan (opposite, top) preps the group on background before an art show visit: Davidson and Field (standing, bottom); (front) Perdue, Lightcap, Garmon; (middle) Felice Valdano, Kwiatek, Spencer; (top) Coleman, Cline, Pohlman, JR Mosier; (standing, top) Reinman, De La Guardia, Cullingford, CJ Mosier.

At the Douglas-Reed House of the Kershaw County Fine Arts Center, Damon Edmondson (far right) concurs with Rob Whitmire that $180,000 is a bit steep, even for a very good Sir Alfred Munnings oil painting. The work was included in a spectacular show of sporting art to coincide with Camden's Colonial Cup Steeplechase, November 27.

On campus, cadets volunteer for community service. Mrs. Melinda Kane, Librarian, supervises (below) Chad Mangum and Greg Ely in purging the card file. Lewis Sharp and Chris Reinman (below, left) distribute latest magazines for recreational reading at Cline Library while Jason Jesseph (below, right) shelves returned books. Time spent pays off in library training for these assistants and assures superior service for cadet patrons.

Major Dale Randolph (below right, opposite) is International Club adviser. Perusing pictures from south of the border are John Montezuma, a Colombian, resident in Singapore; Damon Saunders from Bermuda; Andres Valdano of Ecuador; Julio De La Guardia from Panama; and Alberto Montezuma, Colombian. Grouping of foreign students is informal and the club helps members establish identity in the community. Media focus on their countries makes them resident experts for background on international events.
