

Sports are an important part of life at CMA. Many of life's most difficult lessons may be learned through athletic competition: discipline, cooperation, the effort necessary to do a job well, the importance of accepting both victory and defeat graciously. Athletes test their personal limits, give their best for a common cause, share the pride of their accomplishments with others. Here proud parents escort their sons onto the field before the contest against Asheville School. Mr. and Mrs. Price flank their son David while Mrs. Broome, one of CMA's most enthusiastic fans, accompanies her son Lonnie. Others wait their turn. The Spartans defeated Asheville 34-14.
