

After drill

Cadets squeeze in some precious free time

Up at 6:30. Breakfast at 7:00. Just enough time to clean our rooms before classes begin. Six-and-a-half hours later we stagger out of 6th period only to face LET. Hurry! Drill's about to blow! What is it today? Company drill? Practice dress parade? Get your rifle! Atten-shun! Out to the field. Back and forth. Same old thing. Finally — at last — drill's over, and for the first time all day, we've got a little time of our own. Suddenly, it's a great afternoon.

One of life's simple pleasures: a tie-dyed shirt. OD Paul Furr enviously eyes Matt Davenport's casual get-up.
