

On the pad

*Not everyone has his afternoons
free*

The official term is Tours to be Walked, or TBW's, but everyone refers to it more familiarly as Marching the Pad. You have to do something fairly spectacular — or fairly often — to be assigned TBW's. Some cadets are out there for fighting, others for going AWOL, and several for just piling up astronomical numbers of demerits. But whatever the cause, the result is the same: seemingly endless hours and days of shuffling back and forth in the dust (or mud) of what used to be a tennis court and is now CMA's last resort for cadets who take their rule-breaking seriously. The hope is that they will think seriously before breaking the rules again.

The Officer of the Guard has the thankless job of supervising the pad babies. Today it's Brian Hudson's turn.

There's got to be a better way to spend the afternoon. Chad Selke, Tim Fox, Jeff Dale, and Tracy Sanders take a stroll that's become all too familiar.
