

It may be military, but we're here for the

Classes

LTC Eller repeats the message every chance he gets: "Guys, the most important reason for your being here is for the academics." And it's true. We spend six hours a day in class and another two hours in study hall. We may not always like the work, but we do like to see those grades begin to improve and we like to see our names on the Honors List. Almost every CMA graduate plans to attend college. It's a worthy goal, but it takes a lot of work. What are we waiting for?

Eighth grader Jamie Miller finds that regular study time has improved his grades significantly.