

James T. Dallas

Dedication

After forty years of service at Carlisle Military School and Camden Military Academy, Lieutenant Colonel James T. Dallas is retiring. Colonel Dallas, after seven years as a teacher at Carlisle, came to Camden with Colonel Lanning Risher in 1958 to open CMA and to serve as its first Commandant of Cadets. Over his career he also has served as Academic Dean and as Dean of Student Activities. He has taught French and mathematics as well.

Colonel Dallas served in the US Army during World War II and saw combat in Europe. After the war, he attended the University of South Carolina, graduating with a BA in French and mathematics. As a Fulbright Scholar, he studied for a year in France at Aix en Provence. He and his wife Anne have four children and three grandchildren. For over thirty years, the Dallasses made CMA their home, moving just a year ago from their apartment in the infirmary building to a home in Camden. For many years, Mrs. Dallas was school librarian, and every year she has assisted in any school function where her helping spirit and musical talent were needed.

Colonel Dallas has been a mainstay in the life of Camden Military Academy. He always has had a keen interest in students and an attentive ear for all who sought his counsel. His friendly concern for others, his even temper in all situations, and his sound judgment in affairs of the school will be missed.
