

WORK AND QUIET TIMES

THE CMA WAY

Cadet life at CMA is usually busy and often boisterous. There is the frantic routine of classes, timed meals, drill, and study hall. At other times, stereos blast, vibrating the barrack walls. Laughter and raucous voices reverberate down the hallways. But surprisingly, there are quiet times in between, when the few who are there go about the necessary chores of cleaning rooms, shining shoes, or sorting laundry. And if they are especially lucky, they suddenly find a few uninterrupted minutes to watch a TV program that they really like.

Alone in his room, Sawin finds a few undisturbed minutes to watch TV.

Juggling a can of soda, a bag of donuts, and a loaded clothes hanger, Clarke devises a way to get inside.
