

PEOPLE

Redefining People

Camden Military Academy is the people who compose it: the Cadet Corps, the faculty and staff, alumni, parents, and friends of the school who believe in its mission. That mission is clear and can be stated clearly. "What we do here is based on a sound premise," says LTC William K. Orris, Assistant Headmaster. "We want to give young men outstanding preparation for life, and we believe that we can accomplish that goal if we teach them three things: how to study, to recognize the difference between right and wrong, and to be responsible." That mission is the primary focus of all who compose the CMA family.

Named Commandant of Cadets last year, LTC William K. Orris was promoted to Assistant Headmaster at the beginning of this school term. He is a graduate of the United States Military Academy and holds a master's degree in counseling and education from Auburn University.