A Cut Above in Cadet Life

Most secondary schools have students who have lived many places — all over the world, perhaps; but few have students who fly home at Christmas to locales as far away as Mexico, Panama, Australia, Switzerland, and somewhat nearer — California. The CMA Cadet Corps is drawn from many sources that create diversity and valuable educational experiences. But from it all a commonality of learning emerges. CMA cadets learn respect for others and self-respect, how to work together for mutual goals and how to work alone for personal achievement. As they learn about others, they learn about themselves — lessons to last a lifetime.
