

Cadet Honor

A cadet is a student first; but beyond that, he is a gentleman with all the obligations appertaining. He considers honesty, courtesy, and charity among the highest of virtues. He seeks to appraise himself honestly and to remedy his shortcomings. He deplores cheating in any form. He is respectful and careful towards the property of others and employs reasonable safeguards in preserving his own. He cheerfully follows the rules of common courtesy, frequently putting others before himself. He is charitable towards those less fortunate and freely shares his time and talents with other persons, his community, his state, and his nation.
