

MAJ Lee Dellinger, mathematics instructor and department head, helps Cadet JD King with a problem.

Fire extinguishers abound as Cadet Medeiros conducts this demonstration during the annual Halloween chemistry class program.

Bridges to the Future

MAJ Mohsen Ferjani, French instructor and head of the Foreign Language Department, gives special attention to Cadets Black, Grantham, and Bohlander in French III.

"Bridges to the twenty-first century" has been a favorite topic in this political season. Whether real or existing only in imagery, bridges must be constructed well.

The task of education has always been to build toward the future. The success of individuals and of societies has always begun with the schooling and education of citizens. Building toward a new century makes us take an urgent look at how we are preparing for that new era.

Here at CMA our task is multiplied by the total boarding experience; learning encompasses all areas of our responsibility inside and outside the classroom. Carlisle and Camden have been doing an outstanding job of educating young men since 1892, when the bridge was built to the twentieth century. I feel confident that learning experiences of all kinds here at CMA build the foundation for a great bridge to the next century.

LTC Kelly R. Schrader
Academic Dean