Battlin' Bravo

Bravo Company continues to pride itself upon pulling together to get things done. Company Commander Brent Boyd gives CSM Irtenkauf, tac officer, much of the credit for B Company's spirit of togetherness: "We think he's the best tac officer at CMA. He treats us like human beings--with respect. He treats us as he would his own sons. He's got a great personality."

Bravo still pursues the goals of academic excellence, participation in extracurricular activities, and excelling in all aspects of the military program. Grades are continuing to improve, and there is a high percentage of participation in sports.

One goal that has eluded B Company in recent years is that of being Honor Company. "We really want that distinction," says CO Boyd. "We have been rated best in drill for most of the year, and right now we think we've got the edge."

In an all-B Company volleyball showdown, Greg Semich fakes out Bobby Dingee with a highly deceptive move on the spike.

Company Commander Brent Boyd waits patiently as CSM Irtenkauf takes one of many calls he receives from parents every day.
