Getting It Back

Chargin' Charlie is not used to being in its present position. It was Honor Company for four years running and would like to attain that status again. "We are not used to being out of the limelight, and are determined to get there again," says CPT Eddy Bohlander, company commander. Charlie Company has a long tradition of pride and accomplishment to build on. The company conducts long, drawn out inspections and pays meticulous attention to the niceties of drill. First Sergeant Matt Anderson gets Charlie up early every morning and off to a fast start.

"We are equally concerned with higher grades and training leaders," CPT Bohlander observes. He notes that LTC Kennedy, tactical officer, spends long hours tutoring, counselling, and performing many other services for cadets, such as writing letters of recommendation to colleges. "He supports us totally," says Bohlander.

Although C Company is not Honor Company for the first time in many years, they are taking all the necessary measures to get back on track. Do not count Charlie out. They will be heard from again.
