

R HI Football

JR HI players this year had not played football before, but they improved week and put it all together in the middle of the season against Charlotte on Friday Day. The coaches challenged the defense to get the ball back. On the play they intercepted the ball to give an 8-7 victory with 21 seconds left on offense Adamson was the catalyst for the team. He had two 100 yard games. On defense Berstler was the best hitter; Wallace led the defense; Callaghan had the most interceptions; Scrudato was a hardnosed player and Abbate was reliable every week. Awards went to James Adamson, Most Valuable Offensive Player; Adamson, Most Valuable Defensive Player; Adamson Scrudato and James Wallace, Defensive Award; and Jesse Callaghan, Most Improved Player. JR HI players have valuable experience that they can take to higher levels in the years to come.

Running with great power, James Adamson drags defenders as he bulls ahead.

Cross-country

A Spartan cross-country runner this year required not only great stamina and determination, but also a huge measure of self-discipline. Since the Spartans had only three members, they did not qualify to compete officially in conference meets. However, they did. They ran just as hard as they would have if they had official conference standing. They ran out of shape and measured themselves against the winners in the conference. Even though the Spartans did not receive any official recognition this year, Coach LePage still considers the season successful: "Our runners showed character and improvement throughout the season." Award winners were Eddy Bohlander, MVP; Brad Blazek, Coach's Award; and Justin Scholl, Most Improved.

Coach LePage times the cross-country Spartans as they get in shape for long runs over rough terrain.

MVP Eddy Bohlander easily traverses the fence in a practice run.

Brad Blazek, Coach's Award winner, will anchor the team next year.

MIP Justin Scholl is a promising runner who will add strength to the Spartan roster.
