The Things That Count

Charlie Company has come a long way in recent years. This is a building year for the company. They are trying to improve in every way that counts. They might not be Honor Company on paper, but if people looked at the things that really count, they would be. Charlie Company teaches respect for others and respect for oneself. They are a proud group of people that live like brothers. They owe much of their success to the man who guides them every day, CSM David Stokes, their tactical officer. He teaches them how to be better persons and how to be better leaders. Under CSM Stokes's leadership, they improve each passing day. As a result, they have a lot of pride in Charlie Company. Those who have been there for a while do not want to be in any other company.
