Continuous Progress

Although we believe that Camden Mili-Academy is the best secondary milischool in the country, we are always for ways to improve. We retain a competent faculty and staff to serve the woung men of character whom we to fill our ranks. Academically, we attentive to the demands of a highly propertitive world and add new technobeight aids as they are available. Since mur military component is such an imporpart of our institution, we are conlooking for ways to improve orgamartion and performance. We add new buildings as needs require and money maintain the ensuing physical plant. Renovations are men needed as time goes by.

We are fortunate to have a school that macts young men from all over the countant many parts of the world. The maity of the Cadet Corps has never been been. We were full very early this year began operating off a waiting list in been. We are already accepting appliants for summer school and next fall. The consistent enrollment numbers are to the benefits the Academy offers to the efforts of Admissions Director Robinson and his able assistants to make those benefits known.

We have an exceptional faculty to teach our young men the courses that they need. The new Faculty Advisor Program for imiors and seniors helps them target the schools they want to attend, submit applications, and solve attendant problems m an increasingly complex process. Curiculum additions this year include a colpsychology course through the Uniwersity of South Carolina (two more courses to be added next year) and writvocabulary courses. Next year we also add a business law course taught wan attorney. SAT scores are up, a defiindication of progress. Moreover, we excited about the Southern Associafrom evaluation coming up and are premaring for the process.

An important complement to the classment, military training teaches discipline, memory, self-confidence, and how to the and take orders. Under the direction of Commandant C. H. Armstrong III, Deputy Commandant Rosvelt Martain, and a very competent group of tactical officers, our cadet corps has been rated an "Honor Unit with Distinction" for many years. This year there has been very little disruption in the chain of command. Our cadet officers take their jobs seriously and do their duty well. Their attitude improves the performance of all cadets. The appearance of the corps as a whole has improved noticeably. Cadets are paying more attention to wearing their uniforms properly.

Under the supervision of Billy Watford, our maintenance staff keep our campus in exceptional condition, both the grounds and the buildings. We are renovating the Carlisle House inside and out to update it and to make it architecturally compatible with the rest of the campus. Our crowning achievement this year, made possible by the generosity of Mrs. Martha Cline, is the new chapel, which we expect to be completed in early May. It will be a true chapel, not a multipurpose structure, used only for religious services, weddings, memorials, and a variety of other appropriate purposes. Large enough to hold the Cadet Corps, faculty, and staff, it will contain 364 seats.

The future of Camden Military Academy is one of great promise. In these turbulent times we provide a safe haven where young men can pursue their studies without many of the distractions they would encounter elsewhere. They are taught by highly qualified, dedicated teachers with whose input we evaluate and change our college preparatory curriculum to meet the demands of the times. Our military leaders, among the best in their fields, are role models whom cadets can confidently emulate. Our physical plant is being well maintained and expanded as our needs require. We are justifiably proud of our Academy and its traditions, but we always seek to improve.
