Off-Campus Trips

CMA cadets have the opportunity to go on many off-campus trips during the school year. The purpose of some trips is primarily cultural, such as attending plays or going to the nation's capital. Other trips are primarily recreational, such as skiing or white-water rafting. All trips are educational, however, because they provide new experiences and allow cadets to interact with different people in various places. The Civil Air Patrol takes several trips during the school term. One trip early in the year was to Pope Air Force Base near Fayetteville, North Carolina. The Patrol got to see many different types of military aircraft used in combat and for combat support.

Cadet 2LT Craig Barker sits in the cockpit of a C-130, a large aircraft used to transport both troops and cargo.

Cadet AM Peterson stands by an A-10, a close ground support fighter nicknamed "The Warthog." It is a lethal tank killer, and its titanium cockpit provides maximum protection for the pilot.
