

IN MEMORY

LTC Herman "Sonny" Brown

April 19, 1936 – February 26, 2007

LTC Brown and his wife, Nancy, enjoy Excalibur in 2006.

Doing what he loves to do.

This issue of Excalibur marks the end of an era that began in 1991 when Lt. Col. Herman Henderson "Sonny" Brown joined the staff of Camden Military Academy, following the retirement of Major Burton Gale. His devotion to CMA and his love of teaching was evident in every phase of his Camden career. He taught all grades of English, served as English department chairman from 1998 to 2006, and was the mentoring force behind all of CMA's journalistic activities. In addition to being a guiding force behind the Excalibur, LTC Brown's job description included publishing the school newspaper, taking photos in all CMA photographic events, directing school journalism societies, and serving as the administration's chief editor and quality assurance assistant for school publications and communications. From 1991 until 2007, Camden Military Academy's yearbook has been the annual crowning achievement for each graduating class under his direction. For the first time in sixteen years, Excalibur was forced to go to print without his expert and reassuring hand on the helm. The issue that you hold before you is the last that reflects all-so-meaningful personal touch.

Spending a little time playing music.

LTC Brown in his younger years.

Former Cadets Charlie Carr, JC Lucas, Isaiah Campbell, Matt Calcesaco, and Guy Jones pay their last respects.

The CMA Band played one last song for LTC Brown, "Onward Christian Soldiers"

Thank you, Sonny Brown, for all you have done to bring honor, joy, distinction and class to Camden Military Academy and its faculty, friends, and staff. We will miss you.
