

Fort Jackson Summer Camp

Above: Cadets Feher, Cavanaugh, Isaac, and Roa.

Above: Cadets prepare to jump from the high ropes course.

Above: Cadet Cavanaugh with a US Army JROTC instructor.

The keys to success in the JROTC Summer Camp are teamwork, self-confidence, positive attitude, and a willingness to test one's limits. The summer camp, which is a week-long program conducted at Fort Jackson, South Carolina, keeps cadets constantly active and engaged in character-building activities.

Events include canoeing, ropes courses, repelling, marksmanship, compass reading and orientation, land navigation, field math and science, leadership reaction, and field day sporting events. U.S.

Army instructors provide that professional touch to each participant's experience to insure it is both memorable and worthwhile.

Right: Cadets Roa, Feher, Cavanaugh, Wells, and Isaac enjoy free time at the camp.