

"Character is what really counts in life. What you do speaks so loudly that people seldom hear what you say." - Colonel James F. Risher, founder of Carlisle Military School and Camden Military Academy.

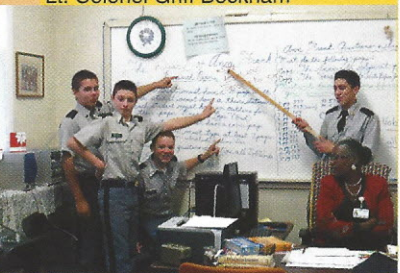

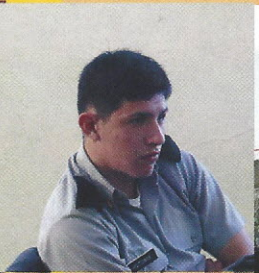

Flipping my Spanish Classroom has been my main goal this year. This flip would allow my students to practice their listening activities at their own pace and as many times as needed in order to improve their understanding. Grouping the students by ability is to be able to structure their learning in a better way." Major Jair Ararat

"To have my students encounter reading and writing as a powerful means of exploring and discovering themselves and their relation to the world at-large." Captain Steve Spratt

"To provide an atmosphere of hard work, which in turn will give the student a good education here at CMA." Captain Guy Eckenroth

"I want to be an enthusiastic and effective teacher that will cultivate a desire for learning in my students." Mrs. Alice Thaxton

"One of my academic goals for this year was to incorporate more technology into my classes, such as math design apps and Khan Academy. I believe that the students nowadays are much more involved with technology so we should embrace that to some capacity." Lt. Colonel Griff Beckham

"One of my goals for this year is to help students become more confident and productive researchers as they become familiar with features of DISCUS databases and tools available in Google Drive." Paula Bordner

"One of my primary goals this year was to inspire these future leaders to become better students both in and out of the classroom. I think one of the best ways to accomplish this is to lead by example and be positive role models. I also wanted to increase the use of technology in the classroom... I achieved this goal through the use of iPads and by requiring students to submit assignments through google docs." Captain David Thomley

"My biggest project has been developing a syllabus and class preparation for a new USC course, HIST 101/102 (European History)." Lt. Colonel Kelly Schrader
