Camden Military Academy...blue and white, swords, flags, rifles, the Excalibur, a ring, drill, military courtesy. On May 22nd, these things will end for the Class of 2016. Buildings rich with tradition, neglected and scorned by modernists and self-edifiers. Places, people...these too will end for the graduating class. We have known what the Spartans' spirit is. We will cherish our memories of the people, the dreams, the events, the lives, and the buildings that are this school. We hope that the new will not forget the old, and that the new will be able to do those things which the leaders of the old were not able to do. This is 2016, our last Excalibur. On May 22nd the seniors will turn their rings outward. We look around; we will never forget the spirit of CMA. Of those who remain, I ask that you remember that this is your school, and that it is what you make it.
