

FOREWORD

WE, THE STAFF of THE '43 REBEL, yearbook of Carlisle Military School, will try to show you life at Carlisle as the typical cadet sees it. Cadets at Carlisle, and in other military schools, see their everyday life through different eyes and voice different opinions.

To some boys, their life at Carlisle means opportunity: Opportunity to work, to play, and most of all to learn. It is this type of boy that becomes the leader.

To other boys, life at Carlisle is merely a dull, monotonous routine. These boys do not seek opportunity, and consequently do not find it. In short, these boys are lazy. We are very glad that the majority of Carlisle boys do not have that attitude toward life.

The staff of THE REBEL take this opportunity to express their gratitude for your fine support which made this, the first volume of THE REBEL, possible. Had it not been for the enthusiastic support of the Corps of Cadets and our advertisers, the publication of this annual would not have been possible.
