

MAJOR JAMES M. GRIMES

Commandant of Cadets

A.B., Wofford College

Instructor of Mathematics and History at Carlisle 13 Years

THROUGH CO-OPERATION, EARNEST APPRECIATION, and interest in each cadet as an individual, our faculty strives to make Carlisle a better school—not only in our class work and what we learn about military, but also in the fundamental things of life—the things that go into the making of a cadet and a gentleman. These are the things for which our faculty works. School activities which are whole-heartedly supported by the faculty are basic in the building of moral standards and leadership. To our faculty members we extend our deepest thanks and appreciation. For now the time has come when we realize that sooner than we had expected we will be out on our own. Then we will be able to understand how much your guidance, your ever-readiness to help with our problems, no matter what they might be, meant to us. To you, we owe our all for our education and for making us what we are today.
