

GOLDEN GLOVE WINNERS

BILLY FAULK

Coach Gil Hoffman's battling Carlisle Mitt squad ripped their way through opposing adversaries during the '49 fistical campaign and finished its boxing season with a highly impressive record.

Highlighting the season's record was the team's commendable trip to Charleston, in which their participation in the Golden Gloves boxing tournament earned for them the coveted Junior Class Team Championship Trophy.

Billy Faulk, Co-Captain of the '49 ringmen and winner of the Junior Welterweight title, received additional glory by being selected as the outstanding Junior Class boxer of the entire tournament. Faulk was also awarded a special Cancer patch for fighting a main event draw in the Cancer fund drive charity fights in Charleston last year.

John Kennerly, after winning his first fight by a knockout, won a close decision in the finals to cop the Middleweight title trophy. This fight was termed one of the outstanding matches of the tournament.

Ira Robinson won the only cadet title in the Juvenile class by virtue of a third round knockout.

Co-Captain Jack Terry, Don Watson, Gene Risher, Edwin Cuevas, and Don Walsh all came through with flying colors in the semi-finals, but lost out in the grand finale. Each was awarded a special runner-up trophy.

J. B. Jones, clever cadet featherweight, who won the featherweight championship title last year, lost a dubious decision in the semi-finals of the tournament.

Other members of the cadet mittmen that went to Charleston but lost out were Richard Hamilton, Tommy Sheley, Leslie Allen, Leonard Melfi, Bill Stearns, Joe Dumond, Johnny Ulmer, and John Brantley.
