

SENIOR CLASS

"Ladies and Gentlemen, because of the paramount importance of the latest war happenings we interrupt our regularly scheduled program of music from Birdland in New York by Don Coble and his orchestra, for a special news summary of the latest developments from around the world."

"This is Johnny Elliott reporting from the newsroom of WCMS, with a complete worldwide round up of latest news from our correspondents at home and abroad. First to Washington and Norman Thomas."

"President Bryson today called a special meeting of the joint chiefs of staff, and cabinet, to discuss the favorable turn of the war. Secretary of Defense Omar Smith suggested the draft call should be lower. Economic Stabilizer Charles M. Shadle stated that 12,000,000 buttons were wasted last year since suspenders were against regulations. Chief of Staff Sterne Bolte suggested a vote be taken as to whether or not the H-bomb should be used to end the war. Those for the plan were: Piatt, Majors, and Truitt, and against the plan were: Suarez, Allan Thompson, and Bamberg. Since it was a tie, the plan was abandoned. And now we switch you to Johnny Aimar at the battle front, on the coast of Baidaratskaya."

"Thousands of troops landed on the icy beaches, in sub-zero weather today. When formation was sounded by bugler Wilber Thompson, gross chaos was created by his failing to blow 'jackets.' Monkey Davis was sent ahead to cut a hole in the Iron Curtain with his acetylene torch, to enable General Forrest Face Melfi, with his well-trained National Guard, to make the famous run on Tavern Valley. Reinforcements were soon due aboard the U. S. S. Mortimer, named after the famous espionage agent, Percy Guest. The giant ship was nosing its way through the Barents Sea. One of the greatest casualties of the war, thus far, was the loss of Captain Tinker Ted Matheson, who was killed while standing in his foxhole reading the reports of Charlie Swindell. Sgt. Billy Foote today committed insecticide, because he couldn't find Jimmy Reid without a shoe shine. During the heat of the battle, Brown R. was found destroying an enemy 'pillbox' with a late model repeating action rifle, named the bullshooter. Private Magee was dispatched to learn the location of the heavy artillery and came back with harmonica in hand saying they were 'down yonder.' Three chief demolition platoons, led by Lts. Sigg, Grinnell and Taft, were captured while
