The Carlisle Literary Club, measuring up to the exalted standards established in its motto, "Through Aspiration To The Stars," and functioning under the attentive guidance and watchful supervision of Captains M. Carson Sturgeon, and James T. Dallas, has succeeded in accomplishing the many goals of achievement set for attainment by President Johnny Elliott including assignments in public speaking, parliamentary procedure, and the correct construction in literary composition.

With various oral and written works on topics and subjects of interest, the members have made very lengthy strides in increasing their knowledge and becoming more literary.
