

CHALLENGE TO THE SENIORS

As we, the seniors of 1955, embark upon our journey into life, let us not forget the ultimate end of this voyage. Do not live from year to year, but rather from day to day, making certain that each day all the responsibilities to our God and our Country will have been fulfilled. Do not forget that, in spite of all the plans you make, tomorrow may never come.

As we go forth, let us vow to do our best to leave the world a better place than it was before we came. Each of us will make his contribution, whether it be in the field of science, religion, politics, or any of the other various fields of endeavor.

To some, graduation is simply a stepping stone to more technical education; to others, it is the end of formal education and the beginning of a task at which they may labor for the rest of their days. Whichever it may be to you, be certain that you conduct yourself in a way that will reflect credit on you, your institution, and your class.

Life will be filled with both disappointments and moments of supreme elation and well-being. Take both in your stride and you will emerge at the completion of it to find yourself fully prepared to meet the Master of men and take your place in the immortal halls of everlasting life.
