

The Bugle Staff is the group of cadets who publish the school newspaper. The members of the staff are chosen by the editor for their journalistic abilities as well as their ability to stick to a project until it is finished.

They begin their task by compiling the material and they write the assignments given them by the editor. When the articles are finished, they are proof read, typed, and taken to the newspaper office where the paper is printed on proof strips. These strips are proof read again and then attached to an old copy of the paper and this "dummy" paper is once again taken to the newspaper office for the final printing. The newspapers are then given to the cadets free of charge and the school absorbs the cost.

The experience gained from working on the newspaper as well as knowledge gained from attending various conventions gives the Bugle Staff members a good foundation for a future career in journalism.
