

SENIOR CLASS HISTORY

It was this year that the Drill team and Rifle team were organized by Maj. Thompson. Major and Mrs. Sturgeon were in the spotlight this year, also. All can remember the day he passed out cigars; the day he became a father. Another year is now at its end. At the end of this year, Capt. Steadman is promoted to Major. 1962-63—now the remainder of these 40 and their classmates were juniors, a big year for "64". The NCO Club, which had been built the year before, was moved to a new location. It now rested across from the Q. M. Store. The sidewalk now around the gym and office was also added this year. The uniform underwent another change. The metal chevrons on the fatigue uniforms were changed. The drill team began wearing a special uniform during performances this year. Before Christmas Capt. Norman was injured in an auto accident. He died during furlough. As before sorrow could not halt the year; Capt. Tiedeman filled in his place.

Captains Hancock and George Martin did not return at the year's start, and their places were filled by Captains Estes and Zemp. This was Capt. Estes second return to the faculty.

Capt. Zemp had graduated from Carlisle. Capt. Ragsdale was also added to the faculty.

This year the commissioned officers built a new clubhouse. Now the year is nearly over and the class of "64" prepares for "their year". At commencement Majors Patton and Thompson were promoted to Lt. Cols. and Capt. Martin was promoted to Major.

During the summer two things happened concerning Carlisle: new classrooms were built and the other resulted from a tragedy. Capt. Ludy Davenport was killed in an auto wreck. 1963-64—we moved into our last year.

Captains Ragsdale and Lt. Col. Patrick did not return and Maj. Sturgeon would not resume teaching until after Christmas, Capts. Walters, Gage, and Hattrich were added to the faculty and Capt. Judy filled in for Maj. Sturgeon. Mrs. McLean replaced Mrs. Thompson as school nurse. Our year has seen its share of changes about the campus. The T.V. room was moved under Memorial Barracks. The 1st Sgts. are now wearing .45 cal. pistols to drill and on duty. Before they wore sabers while on duty. Capt. Gage has been instrumental in bringing back the rifle team and the intramural football program. Also, this year work on a new track has been started.

This has been but a brief summary of our life over the past five years at school. The school and life here have not been the only changing things.

These last five years have seen history made and remade. They were years of strife and unrest. Our nation has been split by the civil rights dispute; cadets saw the Nixon-Kennedy debates on television. Kennedy defeated Nixon for the Presidency by the slightest of margins. Some three years later the same cadets were watching
