The Fifth Yearmen, which consist of those entering Carlisle in the eighth grade, and following on through until graduation, are only eleven in number. Their first year at Carlisle was in the year 1962. They started out with 35 classmates, who through the years fell out of school. The fifth yearmen have seen many changes: anywhere from new buildings to changes in school regulations.

Upon graduation these boys probably feel more sentiment and regrets in leaving than any of the cadets. They have met and made more personal friends through the years, than most achieve in a lifetime.
