The NCO CLUB was started nine years ago by a group of cadets with a lot of free time on their hands, and nowhere to spend it. Since its instigation, it has proved an invaluable organization, as well as an incentive for the new cadets who strive for their "skeeter wings" at mid-semester.

Under the able supervision of Major Jack Steadman, the club has proved a great success, and one of Carlisle's major assets. Through their sale of doughnuts, candy goods and canned drinks in barracks, the club members have in the past — and continue — to maintain their clubhouse and provide for annual suppers at the end of each year.
