

Lifeguards

Walker, Bash, Driggers, Crosby, Moorer, Haymans, Williams, Olliff, Hodge, Morris, L.

Take a close look at these young men, my friends. It is this small group of cadets who risk their lives for the people who swim the "tide." Notice their kind but stern facial features. These are the scars of their dedicated jobs. The stories are only told among each other, but these cadets are well known for saving lives. Of course, we could mention the time PEF had an asthma attack while searching for change on the bottom of the pool by the drain. There were six lifeguards on duty. Six, yes six, dove bravely into the water to save the poor guy. The only problem was that all six lifeguards, individually, were determined to save him. PEF was finally dragged out of the water, but not before he had nearly been water-logged by his rescuers. Their concern for water safety is known, and their rules are well adhered to.
